FIGHT THE PRESIDENT

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 30, 1902.

Trusts Afraid of His Methods.

His Renomination Will

Rumors of a Combination to Work Against Him.

Exclusion Bill Signed-Evans is Named for Consul-General to London.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The President's determination to smash all trusts that do not keep within the limits of the law is becoming so well understood here that political folks have commenced speculating upon its effect upon his nomination for President in 1904.

discussion by the reason that he has personally directed the moves thus far personally directed the moves thus har made against the trusts, and because of the allegation frequently reiterated that he is bringing down upon himself the wrath of the captains of industry, who propose to punish him, if possible, by combining against his renomina-

The reports freely circulated of the President incurring the displeasure of some railway and trust magnates are believed by many politicians in Congress to be not without foundation. The talk is all second-hand, to be sure, but it is all traced to the same source. Senators and Representatives come back from trips to New York, Boston and Philadelphia, and bring reports which they found in circulation that if the President continues his programme the flat is to go forth against him from the men who lead in finance, and participate in politics. Occasionally an ticipate in politics. Occasionally an echo of this talk is heard from Chi-cago, St. Louis and Minneapolis. When the President instructed the Attorney-General to take action against the Northern Pacific Railway merger, J. Pierpont Morgan and other capitalists rushed to Washington and conferred with their friends in official circles. They feared the President might have other similar views in contemplahave other similar views in contempla-tion, and they wanted to head off the repetition of the unwelcome surprise that had been given to financial inter-ests. In that case, however, it was merely stock-jobbing schemes of Wall street which had been joited, and not much sympathy was found in any quarter outside of the unfortunates who were "long" of the market.

The presence at the capital this week

The presence at the capital this week of J. J. Hill, the western railway king. Soon after breakfast this has started the talk going again. Hill is said to have expressed to his friends in Congress, especially to his intimates, the fear that a spirit of hostility to railway and financial interests may be engendered in Congress and become manifest in legislation, reflecting the tone which some capitalists think exists in the executive branch. It is part of the greatly current at the Capital was a large number of Senators and Representatives who have been holding engendered in Congress and become manifest in legislation, reflecting the tone which some capitalists think exists in the executive branch. It is part of the gossip current at the Capitol that Hill does not regard the President's chances of renomination as flattering, if there be any such outcome. The President's initiation of the campaign against the beef trust may be followed by like action, in the case of another food supply controlled by the trust, if ground for action can be shown.

Beet-sugar refiners of the West have been loud in their complaints of oppression on the part of the rival corporation. The talk in this instance, however, is very guarded, and may be more or less speculative. The President's course is highly satisfactory to western representatives. They realize that they will have to face the trust issue in the next campaign. They had fair warning of the coming fight in the last campaign. The President is helping them in the most practical way. They will be arraigned by the Democrats in the event of the failure of Congress to enact anti-trust legislation, and western Congressmen are encouraging him to go ahead with the work. They say it would be the best thing that could happen for him if the word got around that the trusts are to attack him.

A number of Chicago club women who have gone to Los Angeles are planning, under Mrs. Otto Matz's leadership, to go to Alaska before they return. The first boats to Alaska do not leave California until some time in July, but as the club women's tickets expire within two months of their issuance, an effort is to be made either to have some boat make a specially early departure, or for an extension of the tickets. Mrs. Coonley-Ward and other Chicago club women are said to be contemplating the Alaskan trip with Mrs. Matz.
